DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments, see page 12 of the response, filed 29 April 2005, with respect to the rejections under 35 U.S.C. § 112 and 102 have been fully considered and are persuasive. The rejections under 35 U.S.C. § 112 and 102 have been withdrawn.

2. Applicant's arguments filed 29 April 2005 with respect to the rejection under 35 U.S.C. § 101 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that the amendments to claims 1, 12, 13, 15 and 20, defining a carrier structure resolves the resolves the issue under 35 U.S.C. § 101. However, these amendment are insufficient to resolve this issue with respect to these claims. Specifically, as pointed out more fully in the previous office action, these claims are directed towards non-functional descriptive material, namely a digital security image. These images do not, in and of themselves, impart any specific functionality on a general purpose computer or machine, so that they cannot be considered to be functional descriptive material. Such non-functional descriptive material is not statutory, even when recited in a computer-readable medium (see M.P.E.P. § 2106). While the claims now require the digital security image to be embodied "in a carrier," this language fails to define a specific product that would be considered statutory. While a specific, physical product bearing such an image constitute a statutory product under 35 U.S.C. § 101, the instant claims do not define any such specific, physical product. Instead, the claim language encompasses any "carrier" and are only defined by the data embodied in the carrier. Therefore, these claims remain directed towards the non-functional descriptive material, and are not considered to be directed towards statutory subject matter.

In contrast, the amendments to claims 21 and 22 do resolve the issues under 35 U.S.C. § 101, because these claims are directed towards software, which is functional descriptive material (i.e., it imparts functionality on a general purpose computer), and the claims now require this software to be embodied on a computer-readable medium so that the functionality can be fully realized by such a computer system. Therefore, claims 21 and 22, as amended, are now directed towards statutory subject matter.

Claim Rejections - 35 U.S.C. § 112

3. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. § 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

4. Claim 27 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The requirement of claim 27 that the first security characteristic in the Fourier domain be in a range having a frequency higher than 800 dpi is confusing, because it contradicts the requirement of claim 13 (from which claim 27 depends) that this characteristic have a frequency between 150 and 400 dpi. Because 800 dpi is not within the range of 150 to 400 dpi, it is unclear what frequency this characteristic might have or how the two ranges are related. It would appear that the language of claim 27 might better require that the second characteristic have a frequency higher than 800 dpi, which would correspond to the original language of claim 13 canceled in the instant amendment.

Claim Rejections - 35 U.S.C. § 101

5. 35 U.S.C. § 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

5 6. Claims 1-2, 5-16, 20 and 25-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

10 Claims 1-2, 5-16, 20 and 25-27 are directed towards a “carrier” having a “digital security image.” None of these claims are actually directed towards any tangible product itself, but are instead these claims are directed toward any carrier having the claimed digital image, which is descriptive material or data. Descriptive material can be classified as either functional or non-
15 functional. Functional descriptive material (i.e., computer programs or specific data structures) impart specific functionality on a general purpose computer and serve to modify the general purpose computer so that it becomes a specialized computer system. However, functional descriptive material, per se, is not a tangible product of manufacture, so that functional
20 descriptive material is only considered statutory when embodied in a computer-readable storage medium so as to constitute a tangible product of manufacture. Non-functional descriptive material is never considered to be statutory subject matter, in that it imparts no new and useful functionality on a general purpose system and only distinguishes over other descriptive material by the descriptive content. See M.P.E.P. § 2106.

20 The digital image variously defined in claims 1-2, 5-16, 20 and 25-27 does not impart any functionality on a general purpose computer, so that it constitutes non-functional descriptive material, so that these claims are directed towards non-statutory subject matter.

Allowable Subject Matter

7. Claims 17-19 and 21-22 are allowed.

Conclusion

8. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See M.P.E.P. § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 C.F.R. § 1.136(a).

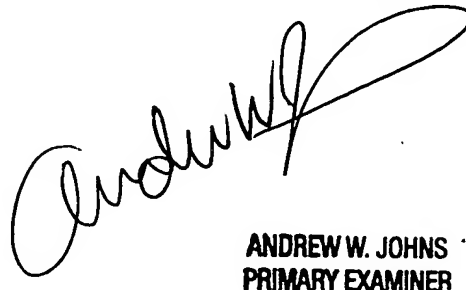

5 A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 C.F.R. § 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
